Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions at the end in the spaces provided in the answer booklet.

For hundreds of years, Historians, Scientists and Archaeologists have been working hard to find out the evolution of man. Many studies of species have been carried out but proved unsatisfactory. The excavations are not only done in Britain but are done all over the world including Africa.

Africa is believed to be a source of ancient remains, such as tools, bones of human creatures, pots and many others. Most of these excavations are carried out on the African continent.

In East Africa, at a place called Olduvai Gorge in Tanzania, Doctor Leakey excavated the bones of a creature, which he believed could have been the first man. From the study he carried out, Doctor Leakey named the creature Homo habilis. Using the Radio Carbon Dating 14, he said that the creature lived over a million years ago.
The word Homo habilis means handy man. The creature had a better thumb and fingers. Homo habilis was able to control the natural resources and environment which surrounded him. Although his brain was quite small, he was able to think of making tools for cutting and scraping. Doctor Leakey named these tools as pebble tools.

Doctor Leakey also found stones beside Homo habilis which were piled together in form of a semi-circle. This semi-circular kind of stone pile was a kind of wall which could have been used as a shelter from wind. Doctor Leakey called it a wind break. This was probably the first wind break or shelter made in the history of mankind.

Other excavations beside Homo habilis included bones of small animals, birds and fish. This evidence proved that he was a hunter and food gatherer.

SECTION F  (15 MARKS)

Read the following passage carefully and then answer the questions that follow.

In Western province of Zambia, there are people known as the Lozi. There are many versions concerning the origin of these people, for instance, it was believed that they came from Zimbabwe due to certain similarities. Some pockets of the Lozi people believe that they have ever lived in Barotseland since they were created there. But most of the historians agree that the Lozi came from the Luba-Lunda Empire up north in Katanga region.

When they arrived in Barotseland, the Lozi people established a kingdom. However, around the 1830's the Kololo came from the South and easily defeated, the Lozi. The Kololo actually started ruling the Lozi up to sometime when the Lozi people reclaimed their power and throne. The leader of the Kololo established a new capital to the southern end of the Kingdom. When he died, the daughter ruled just for a short while after which she was succeeded by her brother.

After a long period of Kololo rule, the Lozi, got back their power. It was at this time that they came to have a Lozi Kingdom again. The Lozi killed all the Kololo men they laid their hands on, and they spared the women who they got as wives. A few Kololo men managed to run away to Lake Ngami. Power struggle began among the Lozi, which saw some kings out of power. At a certain point, in time a ruler called Lewanika became the king. This is the man who tried to bring back some old Lozi customs and he ruled up to 1916.
